Take a look at some of the stuff I've written!

I. Home

Home is not a thing. It cannot be confined within four walls. For me home can be your favourite person, your favourite Place or even a book. It's something or somewhere where you can be yourself.

Even though I have so many favourite books. I always pick Harry potter because I feel like that book is my happy place I feel safe and comforted when I read it. No matter what mood I am in this series always makes me feel like home.

Listening to Taylor Swift always gets me in the feels. from the good old classic love story to willow It captures every emotion. Something about her songs (even the silly ones) makes me think and It's more like an escape from the real world.

I never understood Art maybe It's because I take things in a more straight forward literal way. But I have never learnt how to enjoy art.

It's an obvious and common answer but FRIENDS and Office are my go to on my bad days. I can watch them for hours and hours. I have watched it a hundred times and I still laugh at every joke. I watch these and for a while and I forget everything that's happening around me, and I get a sense of feeling that everything is going to be ok. what is more Home than that. :)

There are many poems but my most favourite is A Father To His Son by Carl Sandburg. I have that poem on my wall in my room so that I can see it whenever I'm feeling sad. The poem gives me confidence to stand and face my problems. I can read it and find comfort and peace in those lines.

Home is my family for me, after a long day I want nothing more than a big hug from my parents or my brother. They make feel like home. I can be myself around them. I can be my most vulnerable self around them. They never tend to disappoint me and are always there for me no matter what.

How do blogs work?

Blogs contain a series of posts made by one or more bloggers. The posts appear in reverse chronological order, with the most recent post at the top of the page, readers can browse these categories or page back through to read the old posts. There are many tips of bloggers depending on their niches, like fashion, food, travel, lifestyle, fitness, diy blogs etc.

Do they get paid?

yes, bloggers can get paid in many ways like sponsored blog content, it's when an organisation pays you a fee in return for you writing an article about them or something related to them. you can also sell online courses, that is if you possess a special skill, use that skill to monetize your blog by creating and selling an online course. bloggers can also make money by placing ads on their site, ads are usually banners that you place in your content or sidebar, Each time a reader clicks you are paid for it , blogging doesn't pay well at first, you want a lot of people clicking your page to see your ads, so the content must be spot on. If you are getting a lot of people to see your content, then you can use any one of these to create ads on your site.
